

BYE BYE THANK YOU!

Video assembled in May 2026 by Samuel Papon.
Destinated to Provisional School For Nothing.

Sequences:

- 1 My mother observing a bird assaulting a mirror in the chicken house, mesmerized by his own reflection.
- 2 Me saying hello to you through my laptop and through your screen, looking at you to see your response.
- 3 The same situation that my mother saw, but with an aggressive rooster this time, that often scares the chickens.
- 4 My friend Marius reading a strange book made of crepes that he found in a Super U. Each crepe was in the same way of the paper.
- 5 Me holding a flag made of a bunch of books that I made. This structure was pictured flat on the ground to make a poster.
- 6 My friend Rose and I holding a fragment of a poem that I wrote to try my new font based on graffiti. The point of this banner was to cover every letter with white paint, because this font was made to be covered.
- 7 Kouki, Rose's cat becoming numb by the food of the new year eve.
- 8 Me assembling lead images on a blank page, making a poster that explore a love story and a entire lifetime. We did this poster with my friend Louise Fantozzi in a few month and accompanying it with a poem that treats the same subjects and also the sensibility of paper and the measures of time.
- 9 My very new classmates of this year, doing a strange speed and sporty exercise, trying to win the prize of best students in Le Havre, at the same moment questioning ourselves on how we ended up signed in this tournament, we barely knew each others.
- 10 Me on my skateboard, doing a project last year about skateboard counter-culture and idiocy as a form of freedom in graphic design, the disposition and forms in this poster were made mostly on my board.
- 11 Another experiment on the same project, this time trying to stick a banner with paperwall glue on a wall, with a very too heavy paper. Didn't end well I had to rip off the banner in small pieces to stick it. Very instructive about Idiocy.
- 12 Small column of letters that I stucked on the bottom of a grid at a square near my apartment in Le Havre. Every column of letters assembled together are making a poem by Marceline Desbordes-Valmore about flowers.
- 13 Ping Pong match between Marius and I, arbitrated by Tom. None of us won.
- 14 Picture of a very blurry plane and the sun.
